What was that?

Something.....good.....just happened?

I almost missed it! For I was looking elsewhere; honestly, I was looking down due to the burdensome nature of reality these days, a depressing gravity that weighs on heart and mind daily and winds up bending thoughts pessimistically downward as the default. It took effort to look up.

But when I did, I noticed things that broke through that heaviness, things as powerful in their effect even as they were nothing extraordinary in outward appearance. A grocery store cashier who is almost always terse and blunt coming to life with my wife and I as he noticed we are avid tea drinkers (“have you tried the new Blueberry Zinger? It’s one of my new favorites!”); our normally “I do my own thing” dog paying me the honor of jumping down from my chair without me having to coax him at all (he thinks it’s his chair, of course!); a kindly interaction at our favorite fast food franchise (let’s hear it for Taco Del Sol!); a sun-beam well placed on a cloudy day; one remaining bloom of a purple crocus the deer didn’t eat (we thought they didn’t like them? In our neighborhood, the deer do not obey any such taste prohibitions); a granddaughter complimenting her grandpa Hop (that’s me!); a finished project, a completed pastor’s pen (in just a bit!), a new staff introduction, a growing number of new people to our church, a wondrous moment with the children on Sunday.....how many are the blessings in our lives that we miss due to our heads – or hearts -- hanging down?

None of the things I mentioned as blessings would register on the scale of earth-shaking events, but neither are they negligible as to their power to transform the day – in fact, they probably carry much more weight to encourage a good day than anything promoted by the news of our world or the darker thoughts of our inner lives.

The key is in shaping our perception towards noticing those everyday matters and people and events which affirm life and uplift goodness; and the key to such noticing is expectation that there is always something before us worth seeing.

None of the things I mentioned as blessings would register on the scale of earth-shaking events, but neither are they negligible as to their power to transform the day – in fact, they probably carry much more weight to encourage a good day than anything promoted by the news of our world or the darker thoughts of our inner lives. The key is in shaping our perception towards noticing those everyday matters and people and events which affirm life and uplift goodness; and the key to such noticing is expectation that there is always something before us worth seeing.

The heavy days of our present worldly and national distress show no signs of abating any time soon, but neither do the lighter days of friendship and spring gardens and children playing and effective advocacy and creative expression that coexist with the heaviness; yet we always have a choice over what we pay the greater attention to in our lives. It is in that choice that we largely determine what our outlook for the future will be -- filled with despair over the way things are, filled with hope over the way things can become, or filled with something in between which strives to see the burdensome things in the light of how they are meant to be changed.

Faith seeks this balance, as Jesus did; and it begins with noticing how God is at work in the world in spite of any evidence to the contrary. Looking at things in a different way has always been God's counsel for those eager to see this world transformed; Jesus showed us how such vision works, by understanding how God works, who God loves, and what God wants, showing us how God moves in us and through us to work grace-filled transformation.

Perhaps this is what makes the greatest difference in life – noticing what really matters. Perhaps this is our greatest power as people of faith – noticing what others miss. And perhaps this is our greatest contribution to the world – to invite others to notice what they otherwise would miss. After all, the love Jesus came to promote is the most noticeable – and needed -- gift to those on the receiving end. And noticing is often the prelude to replication.

God's Grace Be With You,

John Hamel

"Is it Spring, is it morning?

Are there trees near you,

And does your own soul need comforting?

Quick, then - open the door and fly on your heavy feet; the song

May already be drifting away."

MANIFEST LOVE. CELEBRATE WITH PRIDE!

Many of us are looking forward to being a part of the Pride Parade again this year on June 20th. This year we'd also like to "show up" even more as allies for our LGBTQ+ family, friends and neighbors (and get our church name out there in solidarity) by becoming a Missoula Pride Celebration Sponsor. Sponsorships for the Pride Celebration are not inexpensive, starting at $1,000. But we think it's worth it. And if we raise more than the $1,000, we'll share the rest with Reconciling Ministries Network – the national organization that engages us and the rest of the Methodist church in realizing our vision of a more diverse and inclusive church.

To donate by check, put "Pride Celebration" in the memo line, or use the same designation through Breeze, or text: "406-998-1982, Pride".

The funds are important to...

1. Create Free & Accessible Events – They prioritize keeping as many events free and family-friendly as possible.
2. Cover Essential Event Costs – Your support covers critical expenses such as:
 - Sound & Lighting for performances and events
 - Permits & Insurance to ensure a safe and legal celebration
 - Event Safety & Security Measures to protect all attendees
 - Infrastructure like waste management, recycling, and porta-potties
 - Event Staff & Volunteers who make the festival happen
3. Provide Direct Local Support – Proceeds beyond their costs benefit the Western Montana LGBTQ+ Community Center. To date, they have raised more than $65,000 for this vital resource through the last four prior years of Missoula Pride Celebrations.
4. Elevating Inclusion and Building Local Capacity – Funding top-tier performances, broad educational offerings, and safe and inclusive community gathering spaces.

Over 3+ vibrant days (June 19 - 21) they host 50+ events including:

- Downtown Street Party & Parade
- Educational Sessions & Community Spaces
- Dance Parties & Drag and Variety Performances

Help us help Missoula Pride celebrate five years of lifting up LGBTQ+ voices and community with pride!

Thank you!

Mission & Outreach, Reconciling Ministries Team.

Green Notes: Recycle Glass, Compost at First Church for Free Through June

There's never been a better time to join First Church's glass recycling and composting programs.

Through the end of June, all current and new recyclers/composters can participate in the program for free! At the end of June, we will announce a new, less expensive monthly fee based on the number of congregation members and friends who have joined us.

First Church contracts with Recycling Works to collect our glass each week. The collection bins are behind the Sunshine House, next door to our church building. There's easy, 24-hour access to the red-topped bins from the alley. We accept all colors of glass, but it should be clean. Remember not to put any trash in the recycling bins, as Recycling Works will not collect from contaminated bins.

All of the glass we collect is reused for new products — road bed, decking, etc. — or is recycled into new glass jars, bottles and containers. Glass is infinitely recyclable, so recycling couldn't be more crucial.

Soil Cycle is our composting contractor. That bin is also near the alley in the backyard of Sunshine House. These are the items you CAN COMPOST in our bins: vegetables, fruits, coffee grounds and filters, loose leaf tea, egg shells, cereal, bread and grains, mushrooms, plant and flower trimmings, shredded paper (not glossy), used paper towels and napkins.

Let's get busy recycling glass and composting our food waste. Missoula's landfill, and the planet, need our help.

Play Earth Action Bingo; Win a Prize!

Join First Church’s Green Team this month in playing a Climate Action Bingo game focused on the power of small, individual, earth-friendly actions. Have you changed to a green bank? Check the box! Have you joined a peaceful protest calling for climate action? X marks the spot! Did you take the bus one day this week instead of driving? Or did you bicycle? What if you ate plant-based meals for a whole week? Or donated to a climate charity? There are many ways to increase your climate activism and our Climate Action Bingo Card is chock-full of ideas. We distributed a big stack of cards on Sunday, April 19, but still have plenty to share. So ask a Green Team member for a game card, and get to work! Then turn in your winning card no later than Sunday, May 17, and we’ll draw one name from the basket of cards during worship service. The winner will receive a gift basket assembled by the Green Team – surprises! Of course, we will all be winners for taking steps during the month to increase our climate activism. Here we go!
